Scene: Fort Yukon in the Arctic

Time: Present/Winter

Native Alaskan women face far greater danger than wild animals. Across the state women go missing and are never found and their spouses and relatives are rarely prosecuted when violence is evident. Missing but Who's Looking? is a timely play that spotlights one such tragedy in the Arctic, but it's repeated all over the United States for thousands of women, especially those of color who too often are treated as both disposable and invisible.
